Northern Part Of State Receives Cooler Air

Relief in the form of thunder-showers with cooling breezes was expected to reach sun-scorched central and southern Ohio today to end more than a week of 90-degree temperatures. Northern Ohio felt the chill of the cool

Harry Denman, Circleville manager of the Ohio Water Service Company, announced Saturday that Circleville was using daily 100,000 gallons more water, due to the hot weather. He added, however, that the additional demand did not threaten to exhaust the water supply. Total amount of water now being used is 400,000 gallons a day.

wave moving eastward yesterday. Columbus recorded a new temperature high. The mercury reached 97 degrees at 4:30 p. m. yesterday. In Cincinnati the mercury hit a high of 96 degrees.

Friday brought Circleville its hottest weather of the year when the government thermometer registered 102 degrees. It fell to 78 during the night, but started to climb again early Saturday.

Meanwhile, the deaths of 48 Ohioans was attributed either directly or indirectly to the heat wave. Latest victims were Mary Lanich, 15, who was drowned in the Olentangy River in Columbus; Donald Wilson, 9, who drowned in the Ohio River at Ironton; Frank B. Cherrington, New York city school teacher and formerly of Columbus, who died of a heart attack induced by the heat at Delaware, and George Genau, 50, who died of heat prostration at his Cincinnati home.

Plane Finds Body

An airplane was used successfully in the hunt for the body of 18-year-old Cecil Duval, of Middletown, who drowned in a gravel pit east of Trenton. Carl Friedlander, president of the Aeronautical Corp. of America, circled over the place where the victim had gone down and located the body in a short time.

Weather forecasters advised central and southern Ohioans to have patience. They predicted showers and cooler for today and fair weather with moderate temperatures for Sunday.

After a night in which the temperature dropped to the middle 70s, the first time in 36 hours that the mercury had fallen below 80, greater Cleveland had some expectation of at least partial relief.

Duce, Discounting Rumors Of Failing Health, Puts On Show for Newsmen

ROME, July 27—Under lofty umbrella pines shading his private riding ring at the Villa Torlonia, Premier Mussolini today triumphantly rode down foreign rumors that he is in poor health.

Up bright and early in the morning and attired in a thin undershirt, white belt, gray breeches and a yachtman's cap, Il Duce demonstrated that his health and athletic prowess are still good.

With a gold madonna medal around his neck, the Italian chief of state mounted a German-bred chestnut mare and for 16 minutes

RUSE RESULTS IN ARREST OF MANY FRENCH OFFICIALS

LONDON, July 27—Former Premier Edouard Daladier of France, now held by the Petain government for trial, actually was enroute to London to establish a "free" French committee when he was taken prisoner, the London Daily Telegraph said today.

The newspaper charged that Daladier, instead of being permitted to come to London after the French capitulation to Germany, was tricked into going aboard a vessel bound for Casablanca, and immediately made a prisoner. In a dispatch from the "French Frontier," the Daily Telegraph also charged that discontent, resentment and grumbling are now widely evident at Vichy, present (Continued on Page Eight)

NEW AUTOGIRO JUMPS FOR TAKEOFF; TEST APPROVED

PHILADELPHIA, July 27—A new type of autogiro, developed in secret by the Pitcairn Autogiro Company, today had successfully passed its initial public exhibition. The ship, with Fred Soule at the controls, made a "jump takeoff" by rising virtually twenty feet into the air yesterday. It can also land vertically. The plane can be operated on the ground as a three wheeled auto.

trotted, cantered and took brush fence jumps in masterly style.

Then he pulled up the panting animal before sixteen German journalists lined up along a railing and called out in German: "Am I sick, weak and tired?"

To which question the spectators, who included nine Americans and 20 correspondents from seven other nations, replied with a loud and emphatic "no."

His muscles rippled and showing no signs of being winded himself as he encouraged the mare—with affectionate German phrases— to bigger and better jumps, Mussolini seemed to be in the most robust health.

What was more, his riding style appeared superior to that of his 72-year-old riding master Ridolfi and two cavalymen who accompanied him. He circled the ring more than a dozen times and once, when two photographers approached a high brush jump, he shouted warningly: "Away!"

It was Il Duce's first large-scale personal meeting with a group of correspondents at his villa, where the gardens are lined with palm trees and filled with sun flowers, swans and obelisks.

The visiting newspapermen were requested not to smoke when being presented personally to Il Duce, who later exhibited his talent at tennis.

SCOTTSBORO CASE AGAIN

The senate military affairs committee approved the third draft of the bill, but deferred a formal vote until Tuesday. Sen. Sheppard (D.) Texas, chairman of the committee, said final approval would be a formality. Salient features as approved:

ROMANIA AGREES TO GRANT LAND TO HUNGARIANS

BUDAPEST, July 27—Romania has agreed to cede part of Transylvania to Hungary in satisfaction of this country's territorial claims on the Bucharest government, it was reported reliably today.

Indicating that the wheels for the projected carve-up of Romania already are well in motion, diplomatic quarters at Bucharest were reported to have been informed that Romanian Premier Ion Gigu-tu in Salzburg, Germany, yesterday handed a memorandum to German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop, offering part of Transylvania to Hungary.

Hull Confident Of Parley's Success

HAVANA, July 27—United States delegates to the Inter-American Conference of Foreign Ministers today anticipated speedy Latin-American acceptance of proposals put before the parley by Secretary of State Cordell Hull to insulate the Western Hemisphere against inroads by Germany or other totalitarian states.

While it was admitted that these proposals may undergo some modification, the general feeling was that they will be approved by the conference in forms retaining their chief outlines. International News Service learned that the United States delegates already have informed the State Department in Washington that they plan to leave Havana Tuesday night.

When asked by Washington if this meant that Hull felt his efforts had been futile, the delegation replied that, on the contrary, the secretary of state was convinced that the essence of his proposals will have been adopted by them.

Million and Half Young Americans to Join Army

If the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill, which is awaiting congressional action, is passed, approximately 42,000,000 men, citizens and aliens alike, between the ages of 18 and 64, soon will go to the polls to register. Those between 21 and 45 would be liable for military training while those in the other age groups would be liable for training for home defense units. Under present plans, 1,500,000 men, at least 75 per cent of them between 21 and 31, would be drafted for a year's military training at army bases. Exempted would be high government officials, senators and representatives, state legislators, federal court justices, clergymen, members of some religious sects and men whose jobs are essential to national defense needs. Single men with dependents and married men would be granted deferment and probably would not be called at all in time of peace, high officers of the army told congressional committees.

RAILS PREPARE TO HAUL THROG TO HEAR WILLKIE

CHICAGO, July 27—Railroad officials today announced the completion of plans to handle one of the largest passenger movements in the history of the Middle-West—the transportation of an estimated 40,000 persons to Elwood, Ind., to join the throng attending the Wendell L. Willkie acceptance ceremonies August 17.

At least 65 special trains, it was announced, will carry Republicans to the Indiana town to hear their presidential nominee formally open his campaign.

Elwood is served by the Pennsylvania and the Nickel Plate, but other lines will share in the movement through connections with these railroads.

WASHINGTON, C. H., July 27—Jess (Tex) Rickman, 44, of Richmond, Ind., was stabbed to death Friday night during a fight in the Fayette County fairgrounds here.

Prosecutor W. S. Paxson said that Rickman's assailant was Dick Scott, 24, of Xenia, who is being held in the county jail. Paxson will file first degree manslaughter charges against Scott, he said.

The stabbing followed an argument, after Rickman had fired Scott, whom he had employed.

Cincinnati Adds Half Contest To Its League Lead

Champions Club Philadelphia For Seventh In Row After Trailing Part Of Way; Feller, Walters, Derringer May Win Thirty

PHILADELPHIA, July 27—The National League lead of the Cincinnati Reds was stretched to eight and one-half games today as their 9 to 5 victory of the Philadelphia Phillies was marked down in the books.

Paul Derringer hurled under the lights for the Reds and until the seventh inning it looked like the Cincinnati victory march had been stopped. But in the top half of the seventh, the Reds counted four times to take a 6 to 3 lead. Philadelphia had been ahead since the fourth frame. It was Cincinnati's seventh straight win.

WINNER OF CONN, PASTOR CONTEST TO MEET LOUIS

By Lawton Carver
NEW YORK, July 27—There is no very good reason why Bob Pastor or Billy Conn should not whip Joe Louis for the world heavyweight championship, except that they are so small and lack a punch, and Louis hits so hard, is so big and so good generally. Outside of the fact, therefore, that neither Pastor nor Conn has the remotest chance against the champion, the match for the title in September between Louis and the winner of the August 13 fight between the other aforementioned gents should be a huge success, if anybody doesn't get permanently hurt.

Louis probably couldn't hurt Pastor much, for he didn't in two previous fights, but the point is he probably won't get the chance this time. Conn is a 7 to 5 favorite to win from the New York heavyweight next month and thus clinch his place against Louis in the fight announced by Promotor Mike Jacobs yesterday, following his abandonment of plans for a Louisville fight with Max Baer September engagement. Thus does one of the fondest dreams of Promotor Jacobs and Conn move along toward realization. They have worked unceasingly toward that day when Conn would renounce his life heavy-weight throne and go out to try to take Louis' crown. Conn scarcely ever mentions the Pastor bout, he is so confident of winning this one, and babbles on and on about meeting Louis. All right, he's got it if he can get by Pastor. We wish him luck.

HEROES AND BOATS
THE HEROES: Ken Heintzelman, Pirates, who held the Bees to five hits; Larry French, Cubs, who gave the Giants only seven hits and made three himself; Bob Feller who hung up his 16th victory as the Indians beat the Senators.

THE GOATS: Rene Montague and Joe Kraskauskas, Senators, who were pounded for 20 hits by the Indians; Cliff Melton, Giants, who was slaughtered by the Cubs.

Red Birds Win Twin Bill From Apostle Outfit

COLUMBUS, July 27—Kansas City today continued to set a torrid pace for the rest of the American Association baseball teams today. The Blues stretched their lead over the field to 4 and one-half games by edging Louisville, 2 to 1, at Kansas City.

Meanwhile, second-place Minneapolis was dropping a slugfest to Toledo by a 10 to 6 score, and Columbus, in third place, was winning a twin bill from St. Paul by 12 to 5 and 6 to 2 scores.

Indianapolis was rained out at Milwaukee.

dog field trials will be held at Kenton, Sunday, September 1, and Monday, September 2, Col. H. J. "Hank" Pfeiffer announced today.

And speaking of drubbings, Cliff Melton and the Giants took a pip at the hands of Larry French and the Cubs, 14 to 1. Joe Moore, first hitter to face French, homered and thereafter the Giants went into a coma, while the Cubs hammered away at Melton and finally ousted the young man with the loving cup ears in a rousing 8-run seventh inning.

The Cards and Dodgers battled to a fruitless 3-3 draw in a game rained out in the tenth. Two homers by Terry Moore and Slaughter's pinch triple in the ninth saved the Cards.

The Pirates continued to show signs of life blanking the Bees, 9-0, behind the five hit pitching of Ken Heintzelman.

48,104 See Yanks
Spurgeon "Spud" Chandler pitched the New York Yankees to a 10 to 2 victory over the Chicago White Sox and also led the Yankee batting attack by smashing out two homers. It was a night game and 48,104 fans crowded Chicago's south side ball park.

Kirby Higbe blew up in the seventh inning to allow the Cincinnati Reds four runs and beat the Phillies in a night game 9 to 5. The Reds' victory was another win for Paul Derringer. In the other night game Boston outlasted St. Louis 14 to 7.

Henry Remains Finest In The Squared Circle

By Lawton Carver
NEW YORK, July 27—For the first time in a long, long time, the greybeards of pugilism, with their loyalty to tradition and the foibles of the past in the most unique sport of them all, have excuse to give you their ready I-told-you-sos as part of the lingering aftermath to the Henry Armstrong-Lew Jenkins fight. In this particular instance their bleat is against women. They say Mrs. Katy Jenkins cost her husband whatever chance he may have had to beat Armstrong.

For as many years as anybody can remember one of the taboos of boxing has been the womenfolk, whether wives, or casual passersby. Anything in skirts is held to be plain poison to a fighter getting ready for an important bout, and the bars everlastingly have been up against women at training camps.

So what did Mrs. Katy Jenkins do just four days before her husband was to engage Armstrong but go to his camp and take him away from there and into New York as the climax to a feud between herself and Manager Hymie Caplin. As a result Jenkins' training routine was broken up and he finished his work in a New York gym instead of in the more desirable surroundings of a suburban camp. And he finished the fight in six rounds, or midway of the scheduled distance of 12, unable to go any farther.

The kidnapping of her husband away from Mr. Caplin had been duly recorded and commented upon in the press, and you should have heard the howls levelled at Mrs. Jenkins by the, shall we say, old guard over outcome of the engagement. They had plenty of ammunition by virtue of the fact that Jenkins apparently was not in condition.

But what everybody overlooked in the rush to cast asparagus at Mrs. Jenkins was the not unimportant fact that Jenkins probably could not whip the little welterweight champion with a black-jack in either hand. Armstrong has slipped. He no longer has the power or the endurance that carried him to records no fighter ever before approached. But he still is the best man of around 140 pounds in this world by a margin so wide that the rest aren't even close.

And they overlooked, too, that Jenkins had been stopped by third-raters only a few months ago when he was on his way up, and has been notorious as a sprinter, who has to knock his man out early or not at all.

As a matter of fact, he hasn't fought more than eight rounds in any fight in the last year, going back to July, 1939, during which time he started with three eight-round decision victories, then followed that up with eight straight knockouts, the longest time required for any of these being seven rounds. He won the lightweight title in last previous strat before meeting Armstrong by belting out Lou Ambers in three rounds.

It would seem that Mrs. Jenkins has been undeservedly blamed for Mr. Jenkins' failure. Not that her bringing him to New York toward the close of his training could possibly help him, but at the same time, to charge the defeat to her seems to us to be an empty alibi. Armstrong was and will remain a better fighter than Jenkins for the simple reason that Armstrong can take Jenkins' best punches, and still go on to a knockout win.

That is about all you need to establish supremacy of one man over another, whether they be in the ring or up an alley. And no matter how much good condition he may pack into his scrawny carcass, Jenkins will never be a distance fighter. He's good and can hit, but actually he is not completely equipped for his trade.

Capacity Crowd Of 40,000 To See Futurity Event At Arlington

By Harry G. Warren

CHICAGO, July 27—A capacity crowd of 40,000, attracted by the wide-open race, was anticipated at Arlington Park today for the ninth annual running of the $50,000 futurity stakes—the first major test for 13 of the nation's fastest two-year-olds.

Today's running of the grand finale of Arlington's 30-day season, was hailed by turfmen as a preview of the '41 Kentucky Derby.

Of the 13 nominees but one colt, Walmac Farm's New Englander, has failed to enter the winner's sizeable bundle of cash will ride on the nose of the maiden, particularly contributions from longshot players who liked the 30 to 1 overnight quotation and remembered that last year a maiden, Andy K, won the big end of the futurity purse.

The East appeared to hold the edge on the overnight odds board, with Mrs. Parker Corning's Attention the favorite at 3 to 1. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Swing and Sway was held at 4 to 1 as was A. G. Vanderbilt's New World, while Mettlesome of the Brookmeade stable, was quoted at 6 to 1.

New World, the son of Discovery, ran a sensational and smashing race to win his only eastern start. Swing and Sway's sire, Equipoise, set the world mark for the Arlington trip with 1:34 2-5, back in 1932.

Railbirds in search of dark-horses pinned their hopes, as well as cash, on Cleveland Putnam's Swain, quoted at 12 to 1. This horse, which as a yearling was bought over the bargain counter for $2,500, has developed a liking for stretch running. All indications point to the possibility that he will like the six furlongs of the futurity, which is a half furlong farther than two-year-olds have been asked to go this year. Swain gave a demonstration of his prowess by running a good second behind Swell Chance, a non-futurity eligible, in a warm up race this week. In the beaten field, too, were such entries as Millsdale Stable's Kansas, Mill River Stable's War Result and Woolford Farm's Kansas City.

Chicago racing fans will be riding with Warren Wright's Whirlaway.

If all 13 horses compete today, the race will gross $49,563 and represent a net of $35,470 to the winner. Horses finishing second, third and fourth receive $6,000, $3,000 and $1,500 respectively.

CHALLEDON AND KAYAK TO MEET IN DREAM RACE

HOLLYWOOD PARK, Cal., July 27—Challedon and Kayak, followed by ten caboose which say haven't been spotted in their numerical order of finish were to have it out in a "dog eat dog" turf scuffle this afternoon.

Specifically known as the $50,000 Hollywood Gold Cup the race may possible come to be remembered by the association's stockholders as the track's first million dollar betting day in the three year history of filmland's betting spa.

If 60,000 prospective spectators don't mind walking in their sleep the gold cup has been elaborately billed as "the dream race," and it could well be anybody's nightmare.

Challedon and Kayak, without even canvassing the Maine and Vermont delegations can easily win the nomination as the two outstanding stake horses of the country this year. The only annoying problem to the two dollar bettor seemed to be which of the two is the best equine, man and beast.

Challedon is two up on Kayak, a transported Californian by way of Buenos Aires, but those two Challedon triumphs were scored last year and any way map reader will admit a lot of things have happened since then.

World Series In Its Entirety Could Be Put On In Yankee Stadium

By Ed Kieley
NEW YORK, July 27—If per chance the Yankees should come on in the latter half of the season and win their fifth consecutive flag and the Brooklyn Dodgers bunting for the first time in 20 years, there has been talk of a proposal that the entire World's Series' games—seven or less—should be played in the commodious Yankee Stadium.

At the moment, of course, such a suggestion is a little out of line, especially when it is considered that the pennant race is just rounding the half-way pole.

But the daring Dodgers are considered by all competent observers as a likely candidate for the senior circuit honors and hardly anyone will sell the Yanks, whose powerhouse attack has not been functioning, short.

The chief reason for the proposal stated above is that Ebbets field, home of the Durocher Darlings, doesn't hold enough seats to accommodate a regular post-season gathering, and you can bet all of Hitler's tanks that if such a series should come to pass, previous attendance records will go by the boards.

In addition to being the greatest "shot in the arm" to the game since the days of one Babe Ruth, President Leland Stanford McPhail of the Dodgers is also a business man, with one eye on the line score and his best glimmer on the gate receipts.

He realizes that when the line score totals in favor of the Brooklyn, the "take" at the gate rises accordingly. Therefore, Laughlin! Larry, the only magnate ever to call the sheriff to halt a riot and then, when the police arrive, strike the first blow to get the trouble underway officially, will spend his velvet to get the fervid Flatbush rooters the best material possible.

Many of baseball's conventions, of course, will have to be shunted aside to make way for such unprecedented action. Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, the vicar of the National pastime, will have to approve such a measure and no one can be too sure how the white-haired old gent will react.

The Yankee officials undoubtedly would be only too pleased to stage the classic in the famous "House that Ruth Built." In fact, the Yankee officialdom would shout with joy if they knew their club was going to accomplish the almost insurmountable task of winning another pennant.

It is doubted if Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers would have any objection. First, because his team has been to date much more successful in foreign invasions than they have been in home ground defenses. And second, because capacity crowds at the Stadium would make for a much larger bonus—and who, let us ask, would be averse to such a thing, especially in these trying days.

Meantime, all the Yanks and the Dodgers have to do is win their respective fights and with the

Cincinnati Adds Half Contest To Its League Lead

Champions Club Philadelphia For Seventh In Row After Trailing Part Of Way; Feller, Walters, Derringer May Win Thirty

PHILADELPHIA, July 27—The National League lead of the Cincinnati Reds was stretched to eight and one-half games today as their 9 to 5 victory of the Philadelphia Phillies was marked down in the books.

Paul Derringer hurled under the lights for the Reds and until the seventh inning it looked like the Cincinnati victory march had been stopped. But in the top half of the seventh, the Reds counted four times to take a 6 to 3 lead. Philadelphia had been ahead since the fourth frame. It was Cincinnati's seventh straight win.

OLIVER TORRID WITH SUB-PAR ST. PAUL ROUND

ST. PAUL, July 27—Ed Oliver, the pudgy pro from Hornell, N. Y., had a headache yesterday, but the rest of the field of 42 seeking a piece of the $7,500 St. Paul Open golf tournament purse had headaches today as they considered Oliver's six-under-par opening round card.

Despite a headache so severe he had to take a bromide during his outgoing nine, Oliver negotiated the Keller course in 33-33—66 to pace the field, largely on account of his faultless approaches.

Two strokes off the pace were Bill Kaiser of Louisville, Frank Moore of Detroit, Jimmy Hines of Lakeville, N. Y., and Johnny Revoita of Evanston, Ill.

Jim Ferrier of Sydney, Australia, paced the amateurs with a 34-35—69, where he was bracketed with Jim Foulis of Hinsdale, Ill., Len Mattson of St. Paul, Tony Penna of Dayton, O., and three Chicagoans—Ralph Stonehouse, Johnny Bulla and Dick Metz whose 270 last year set a tournament record.

Seven contestants, including Horton Smith, Ralph Guidahl and Ben Hogan, broke par with 70s, ten were one under with 71s, and eleven, including Walter Hagen, carded regulation 72s.

UNKNOWNNS MEET IN FINAL ROUND OF PUBLIC JOUST

By Russell Fuller
RACKHAM GOLF COURSE, Royal Oak, Mich., July 27—What started out as field of 190 from every section of the country at the beginning of the week was reduced to two midwesterners today and they were to battle over a 36-hole route for the National Public Links golf title.

The opposing linksmen who were to tee off from the Rackham Course promptly at 9:45 a. m. were Robert Clark, 31-year-old medical supply salesman from St. Paul and Michael Dietz, 23-year-old unemployed automobile worker from Detroit. Both were unheralded and virtually unknown.

The two won their way into the finals yesterday with victories over Edward Furgol, 22-year-old metal polisher from Utica, N. Y., and Roy Doce, Denver efficiency expert. In a terrific struggle waged in blistering heat, Clark eliminated Furgol one up on the 38th hole. Dietz had an easier time in downing Doce, 3 and 2.

Both finalists are cool, steady types of golfers who seem to bear down when the going is toughest. But if it continued warm today, Dietz was given a slight edge. For Clark, by his own admission, has lost more than 10 pounds since Monday and said after yesterday's match that he was bothered more by the heat than any opponent.

On the other hand, the slightly built Dietz seemed to revel all week in the hottest of weather of the year.

At the moment, of course, such a suggestion is a little out of line, especially when it is considered that the pennant race is just rounding the half-way pole.

But the daring Dodgers are considered by all competent observers as a likely candidate for the senior circuit honors and hardly anyone will sell the Yanks, whose powerhouse attack has not been functioning, short.

The chief reason for the proposal stated above is that Ebbets field, home of the Durocher Darlings, doesn't hold enough seats to accommodate a regular post-season gathering, and you can bet all of Hitler's tanks that if such a series should come to pass, previous attendance records will go by the boards.

In addition to being the greatest "shot in the arm" to the game since the days of one Babe Ruth, President Leland Stanford McPhail of the Dodgers is also a business man, with one eye on the line

Vermont delegations can easily win the nomination as the two outstanding stake horses of the country this year. The only annoying problem to the two dollar bettor seemed to be which of the two is the best equine, man and beast.

Challedon is two up on Kayak, a transported Californian by way of Buenos Aires, but those two Challedon triumphs were scored last year and any way map reader will admit a lot of things have happened since then.

ASHVILLE

By S. D. Fridley
Ashville, Phone 79

A few weeks since word came from the daughter, Mrs. Wright at Montour Falls, New York, telling of her father, the here well known Sam Hummel, having been stricken with paralysis. A letter received yesterday from Mrs. Wright said that he has made some improvement, being able to be out of bed part time. He is 85 years of age and a native of this county.

Just received a post card from Archie Peters under date of the 23rd and sent from New York City where he is attending the Fair. The post card bears a picture of the ship Queen Elizabeth which is entered in the New York harbor during the period of the war and at a cost of $5,000 per day, he says. Said they had a big rain at the fair last night. And too, turned everything here over in our keeping until his return.

Talked to band director Fred Hines about their outing, up at the church people were holding their annual chicken supper and his band was giving a concert. Said they had a large attendance and everybody had an enjoyable evening, even though it was hot. Said the band goes to Springfield Sunday, the V. F. W.'s holding a convention there. August 3 to Commercial Point Field Day and to Harrisburg the 8th. The date for the Lithopolis big day when both the new village fire engine and the new bridge will be dedicated, has not been set. The band will have a part in these exercises.

Frank Grice, our local melon and lima bean grower whose plantation covers several acres down in the Cromley creek bottoms, told us that the recent rain was of great benefit to his growing crop. And too, from him we learned that watermelon vines can withstand much more drought and lack of moisture than musk melon vines and "farming" we have learned through inquiry that a large percentage, 75 and more, of the wheat just harvested, has been placed in storage.

Ralph Cloud has purchased from Mrs. Sarah Martin her dwelling property on North Long street. To many it is known as the Jeffries property and later occupied by the late G. D. Griffith and family.

Local manager of the telephone office, Hoadly Brintlinger, is out on vacation for a couple of weeks.

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for July 28 is Proverbs 1:7-10; Isaiah 5:11, 12, 18-23; Galatians 6:7-9, the Golden Text being 1 Timothy 4:8 — "Godliness is profitable for all things, having promise of the life which now is, and of that which is to come").

FATHERS and mothers of all times have been earnestly concerned about the conduct of their children, giving them advice and striving to guide them in the ways of temperance and right living. Back in 1,000 B. C., Solomon Son of David, king of Israel, said: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge; but fools despise wisdom and instruction."

"My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and foresake not the law of thy mother."

"For they shall be an ornament of grace unto thy head, and chains about thy neck." To the mind of an Israelite no badge of glory was higher in worth than the garland worn around the head or the gold chain about the neck, which were worn by kings and favorites of kings.

Then Solomon makes this earnest direct appeal: "My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not."

How to Make the Young Strong b
How to Make the Young Strong b
ple in rightness of the conviction that "in righteousness there is strength," and to say "No" to the often attractive "sinners that entice" them, is the problem. To bring them up in the "fear of the Lord," as Solomon says, and to set them good examples of temperance, spiritual living, is the best that any parent can do.

The misery that comes from intemperance is suggested in Isaiah 5:11, where he says:

"Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink; that tarry late into the night, till wine inflame them!"

"And the harp and the lute, the tabret and the pipe, and wine, are in their feasts; but they regard not the work of Jehovah, neither have they considered the operation of his hands."

Woe surely follows those who do not obey the laws of God in life. Nothing is surer than punishment for the drunkard and wastrel. How to make those who incline to this sort of living see to what is leads, is the problem of all parents and friends of those who are so inclined.

Tenderly, appealingly, we should, like Solomon, make the appeal: "My son, hear the instruction of thy father." "If sinners entice thee, consent thou not."

The topsyturvy thinking of those who "eat, drink and are merry," giving no thought for the consequences, is summed up for us in very striking language by Isaiah:

"Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!"

"Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes and prudent in their own sight!"

"To drink wine, and men of strength to mingle strong drink;"

"That justify the wicked for a bribe, and take away the righteousness of the righteous from him."

These words surely apply to those who tempt young people to drink by telling them they are not "good sports" if they do not follow the crowd. How many young people of both sexes have fallen for that slur—to their own deep regret and the agony of their families!

In Galatians 6 Paul warns: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

And finally, as added encouragement to us all to live in the spirit and to cultivate the things that make for life everlasting, Paul says:

"And let us not weary in well-doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

"Godliness is profitable for all things, having promise of the life which now is, and of that which is to come."

ASHVILLE

By S. D. Fridley
Ashville, Phone 79

A few weeks since word came from the daughter, Mrs. Wright at Montour Falls, New York, telling of her father, the here well known Sam Hummel, having been stricken with paralysis. A letter received yesterday from Mrs. Wright said that he has made some improvement, being able to be out of bed part time. He is 85 years of age and a native of this county.

Just received a post card from Archie Peters under date of the 23rd and sent from New York City where he is attending the Fair. The post card bears a picture of the ship Queen Elizabeth which is entered in the New York harbor during the period of the war and at a cost of $5,000 per day, he says. Said they had a big rain at the fair last night. And too, turned everything here over in our keeping until his return.

Talked to band director Fred Hines about their outing, up at the church people were holding their annual chicken supper and his band was giving a concert. Said their was a large attendance and everybody had an enjoyable evening, even though it was hot. Said the band goes to Springfield Sunday, the V. F. W.'s holding a convention there. August 3 to Commercial Point Field Day and to Harrisburg the 8th. The date for the Lithopolis big day when both the new village fire engine and the new bridge will be dedicated, has not been set. The band will have a part in these exercises.

Frank Grice, our local melon and lima bean grower whose plantation covers several acres down in the Cromley creek bottoms, told us that the recent rain was of great benefit to his growing crop. And too, from him we learned that watermelon vines can withstand much more drouth and lack of moisture than musk melon vines and "farming" we have learned through inquiry that a large percentage, 75 and more, of the wheat just harvested, has been placed in storage.

Ralph Cloud has purchased from Mrs. Sarah Martin her dwelling property on North Long street. To many it is known as the Jeffries property and later occupied by the late G. D. Griffith and family.

Local manager of the telephone office, Hoadly Brintlinger, is out on vacation for a couple of weeks.

Job's Repentance and Restoration

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for July 28 is Proverbs 1:7-10; Isaiah 5:11, 12, 18-23; Galatians 6:7-9, the Golden Text being 1 Timothy 4:8—"Godliness is profitable for all things, having promise of the life which now is, and of that which is to come").

FATHERS and mothers of all times have been earnestly concerned about the conduct of their children, giving them advice and striving to guide them in the ways of temperance and right living. Back in 1,000 B. C., Solomon Son of David, king of Israel, said: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge; but fools despise wisdom and instruction."

"My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother:

"For they shall be an ornament of grace unto thy head, and chains about thy neck." To the mind of an Israelite no badge of glory was higher in worth than the garland worn around the head or the gold chain about the neck, which were worn by kings and favorites of kings.

Then Solomon makes this earnest direct appeal: "My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not."

How to Make the Young Strong b
How to Make the Young Strong b
ple strong in the conviction that "In righteousness there is strength," and to say "No" to the often attractive "sinners that entice" them, is the problem. To bring them up in the "fear of the Lord," as Solomon says, and to set them good examples of temperate, spiritual living, is the best that any parent can do.

The misery that comes from intemperance is suggested in Isaiah 5:11, where he says:

"Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink; that tarry late into the night, till wine inflame them!"

"And the harp and the lute, the tabret and the pipe, and wine, are in their feasts; but they regard not the work of Jehovah, neither have they considered the operation of his hands."

Woe surely follows those who do not obey the laws of God in life. Nothing is surer than punishment for the drunkard and wastrel. How to make those who incline to this sort of living see to what is leads, is the problem of all parents and friends of those who are so inclined.

Tenderly, appealingly, we should, like Solomon, make the appeal: "My son, hear the instruction of thy father." "If sinners entice thee, consent thou not."

those who "eat, drink and are merry," giving no thought for the consequences, is summed up for us in very striking language by Isaiah:

"Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!"

"Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes and prudent in their own sight!"

"Woe unto the that are mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to mingle strong drink;"

"That justify the wicked for a bribe, and take away the righteousness of the righteous from him."

These words surely apply to those who tempt young people to drink by telling them they are not "good sports" if they do not follow the crowd. How many young people of both sexes have fallen for that slur—to their own deep regret and the agony of their families!

In Galatians 6 Paul warns: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

And finally, as added encouragement to us all to live in the spirit and to cultivate the things that make for life everlasting, Paul says:

"And let us not weary in well-doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

"Godliness is profitable for all things, having promise of the life which now is, and of that which is to come."

PLOTTING DIPLOMATS

GERMAN "fifth column" activities in the Americas have received the serious attention of delegates at the Havana Conference. Proposals were made that the work of diplomats and consular agents of the totalitarian powers be investigated and their immunity privileges perhaps be curtailed.

It is not proper for the authorized representatives of foreign powers to plot against the government of the country in which they are stationed. But lately that seems to have been one of the chief missions of Nazi diplomats in all the countries which have so far fallen before the German advance, and it is doubtless an important part of the work of many of them in this hemisphere. No one should seek to curb their legitimate activities, but neither can they be allowed to undertake the destruction of government under diplomatic immunity.

BRITISH OFFENSIVE

WHY are the British taking the apparently imminent blitzkrieg so calmly? Because, now that she is really on the job of defeating the Nazis, Britain has begun to take her usual long look. Her plan is simple:

First she will fight the invading Germans dune by dune of the beaches, street by street of the cities, hill by hill and town by town until she has been able to throw them out for good. By this time, she admits, she is going to be pretty weary and somewhat damaged—but you should see the other fellow! Germany, she says, will then be exhausted. Britain is already set to fight the invader from her own isles. What she is buying munitions for at the present moment, for future delivery, is for the great offensive which will follow. These bombings and swattings the British have to go through meantime are mere minor details. What they have their eye on is the day Churchill rides through Berlin.

Two things to remember about a July second that its worst effects can be avoided: first that it's normal and second that its worst effects can be avoided by following the well known rules of rest and temperate eating and drinking.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up a pair of hours earlier than usual and spent a few moments abusing the fan for not doing a better job during the night. Visited the back yard where a pert wren was singing delightfully. Wondered what happened to the woodpecker that for weeks rolled out his early morning call on the light pole in the alley. Cast a disinterested eye at weeds growing in the garden and envied the dog that was stretched out contentedly on the ground in the shade. Noted the lawn was wet, but am not yet certain whether from dew or sweat. Took my coffee cold and headed downtown to join Rotarians in the First Annual Farm Tour.

Stopped first at Clay Hitler's farm in Washington Township to view erosion control under government supervision. Clay has 140 acres, the main income from which is on grass and hay with his net income as much as could be produced by grain. Strip farming there with diversion terraces preventing washing. Learned that the crop producing soil of Ohio originally was only 8 to 10 inches deep and that much of the land already has lost 25 percent of this soil.

Next did visit Sterley Croman's four acre poultry farm and hatchery. Sterley started there with 200 hens and later began the sale of chicks. He now has incubators with 111,000 egg capacity and has 65 flock owners in the county producing eggs for him. He supervises the production and pays a big premium for the eggs. A fine job being done there. The plant produces 300,000 chicks a year. And that is a lot of chicks. Learned that 1,468,000 acres of land are necessary to produce the food consumed each year by Ohio's chickens. Also that Paul Johnson some time back culled his flock of chickens and that Bob Brehmer bought the culls. Within a few weeks Bob was getting more eggs from the "culls" than Paul was getting from his select hens.

Enroute to Bob Musser's stock farm the Rev. Robert Kelsey told of grace said by the young son of Dr. Robert Reed, pastor of Indianapolis Presbyterian church up Columbus way. The boy apparently had been listening in on the radio, for he bowed his head and said: "This food is coming to you through the courtesy of God Almighty."

That Musser farm is quite a place. There did inspect his grand herd of Guernseys and listened as his expert herdsman explained about the cattle and later some of the finest hogs I have seen, all Hampshires. Learned that the average cow there is producing 400 pounds of butterfat a year as compared with the county average of 150 pounds, and did see some bovine royalty that has 600 production records.

Next to Homer Quillen's farm, Homer being a hybrid corn raiser and breeder of Angus cattle. Listened with interest as he showed how hybrid corn is handled in production tests and stood amazed as he declared that in each patch are 150 or more different kinds of corn. Didn't know there were that many.

Roger Hedges' place followed, there seeing the production of hybrid corn, all a hand process and a task in the hands of F. D. Richey, the world's outstanding hybrid corn expert. He explained it all, some I got, some I didn't, so never would attempt to put the process down on paper. Interesting, very interesting. You should see it.

Last on the tour was the C. B. Teegardin & Sons farm that has produced so many International short horn champions. Paul Teegardin, who is president of the National Polled Shorthorn Breeders Association, paraded his animals for us and explained their fine points. Since the hour was near noon I had difficulty viewing that fat stock as anything except steaks, but Teegardin cattle are entirely too blue blooded to be eaten. About 145 head of cattle now on the place and of that number about a score soon will be headed out on the livestock show circuit. More blue ribbons to be added to the already great collection of the farm.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

ARMY WEAKEST LINK

WASHINGTON—Now that the job of nominating presidential candidates is over, the Nation's Capital is settling back to the main problem before it—that of national defense.

Both branches of the service are in the hands of two brand new cabinet officers, both Republicans, and both keeping politics strictly out of the Army and Navy. In the case of the former, Henry L. Stimson has a far more difficult problem on his hands than when he served as Secretary of War in the Taft Administration.

He is up against the fact that for exactly twenty years—ever since the World War—the United States Army has been as moribund and antiquated as the Indian forts which it still maintains on the Western prairies.

Here is example No. 1 of what Secretary Stimson is up against.

If a foreign power wanted to subdue the United States, its most logical strategic move would be to establish a line through Detroit or Cleveland south to the Ohio River. This would cut the industrial East off the agricultural West. It would sever New York and Philadelphia to the Middle West. It would stop iron ore shipments from the lake regions. It would starve out New York.

Yet although army officers admit this is the strategic area they will have to defend, the overwhelming mass of U. S. troops today is located in the South and West in the wide open spaces which they may never have to defend.

BIG CITY FIGHTING

Hitler has won the present war largely by military operations inside densely populated areas. His troops have been trained to operate in Oslo, Rotterdam and Antwerp. Fighting in city streets is far different from fighting on the plains of Oklahoma, yet there are almost no troops in or around the big cities of the Atlantic seaboard.

As a matter of fact the location of the U. S. Army today is based not upon tactics or strategy, but upon the climate. "But the weather!" moans the average army officer when you start talking to him about transferring to a new post in the East.

If the high command of the U. S. Army were awake and interested in something more than paper defense, it would hold regular maneuvers in the most densely populated industrial areas of the United States, and would station a large part of their men regularly east of the Mississippi River and north of the Ohio.

IGNORANCE OF TACTICS

Example No. 2 of inefficiency is the complete lack of army officer interest in tactics. Most of the high-ranking (Continued on Page Six)

LAFF-A-DAY

DIET AND HEALTH

Call of Open Road Rivals Spa Treatment

IS THERE any advantage in a vacation at a resort for mineral springs or can't you do as much good taking to the great open spaces?

Spa treatment seems to have more or less gone out of fashion and undeservedly so. It used to be the regular thing for the family to vacation at the springs—now the regular thing is to get in the automobile and ride, ride, ride.

It certainly can be said, in general, that the ride-ride vacation is best suited to young and vigorous members of the family. It's likely to make the older ones need a little time to rest to recover from their vacation. They can have a good, restful, healthy spell at the springs though.

Beneficial Routine

When you get down to analyze the good that mineral springs do, you must acknowledge that the routine life imposed on you at a spa is of more value than the waters.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

All good spas now have arrangements for baths, dietary regulation, exercise and massage and competent medical consultation is available to outline a proper daily routine.

This treatment is of value in chronic disabling conditions including those affecting the heart and circulation, rheumatism, digestive-chronic stomach, intestinal and gallbladder conditions, nervous and, occasionally, skin troubles.

Different mineral waters are of value because of their alkaline properties, salts of calcium or phosphate, mild laxative properties, iron content or natural heat. Whether the minute amounts of radium some of them contain do any good is doubtful.

Water as a cathartic.

In thinking of natural cathartics we stress the value of roughage foods and give no attention to the claims of plain, good old-fashioned water.

Water—six to eight glasses a day, more in summer time—is necessary for the maintenance of the equilibrium of the body. As a cathartic it initiates the peristaltic movements of the intestine gently and naturally. Water immediately leaves the stomach and as soon as it reaches the intestine it stimulates the intestinal muscle to movement.

This is the reason for the good effect of a glass or two of hot water drunk in the early morning before breakfast. They should be taken slowly while dressing.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. E. Toronto, Ont.—"Is there any treatment for loss of taste and smell? I had an extremely bad cold three months ago, and though I had enough taste back to distinguish bitter from sweet, my smell is still completely lost."

Answer—Taste and smell will both return in time. There is nothing to do to hasten it except to keep the mouth clean with tooth brushing and gargles and douching the nose with salt water.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

QUITE IDLY Linda bought an evening paper from a corner news stand as she crossed the street to the all-night coffee pot where she would get a sandwich and some ice cold milk.

She was not thinking about her picture or the announcement that might be made as she opened it and spread it on the counter. Therefore, she gave a squeal of pure surprise when she saw her face smiling back at her.

The story was brief. It didn't concern her nearly as much as it did Ronnie. He was one of the young swing princes with a following. It was news to the public that he was in love. A couple of hundred thousand jitterbugs would read the lines with excited interest. She smiled, sipping the milk. That was all right. She couldn't write, paint, act, sing or do anything else well enough to make a career of it. She wanted to be Ronald's wife and make him a success.

The man behind the counter answered the telephone and called to her: "The girl working with you wants a vanilla milk shake. Nearly through? Shall I put it on?" She nodded, wrinkling her nose, wondering if Ronnie had seen the papers. She wondered, too, just how the story had broken. Surely he couldn't have told the reporters. That wasn't his place. Oh, of course, she had public relations men, and it was their job to make news out of every event, she decided.

She turned the page and began to read a chit-chat gossip column which concerned people whose names were news in the social, theatrical, literary and professional world. Sometimes she found a name she knew in the column, now that Ronald had opened magazine doors to her. Sometimes the Bagley models were mentioned and it was her job to make notations when they were.

With her sandwich raised to her mouth she stopped. Her own name was staring at her in the paper. Her name was there, and Ronald's name—and Sarah's name.

She drew a deep breath, put the sandwich on the plate, and read slowly: "Announcement of the coming marriage of the crooner-swing-trumpeter, Ronnie Stafford, was made by Sarah Markley, daughter of the producer of the show that swung the Stafford horn over the top. Society wonders why she broadcast the news. By the way, Ronnie is marrying Linda Avery, receptionist at the Bagley office, where beauty assemblies daily."

Two emotions surged through Linda as she read the notice. There was one of relief because Ronald had not told the press of the engagement. There was one of distrust of the girl who had. Was Sarah going to be a plague forever and forever? Or was she trying to get Ronald out of her life as quickly as she could?

The man behind the counter had prepared the milk shake and placed the container by her plate. Mechanically Linda picked up her check, paid the bill, and started across the street.

The janitor and watchman from Linda's floor was eating at the counter and turned to smile at her as she passed. He was a timid old man with white hair and a beard. Often she had wondered why he had to work in a city office building at night. He seemed fragile, no designed for a little town, a small house and garden and much peace. She waited until the green traffic light changed to red. The air was growing cooler, and there was a hint of rain in it. Traffic was speeding swiftly up the avenue and voices were a little more rested as people passed.

She glanced at the clock on the Grand Central Palace and noticed that she had been gone barely 15 minutes. Ronald had given her a pass to his show, so she decided that when the work was finished and Mr. Bagley came at ten, she would slip into a dark seat, watch the play end, then wait for him.

She crossed the street then, entered her office building, and remembered that Caroline was home alone waiting for Terry to call. Linda was fairly sure that Terry would not call. By this time his evening must be arranged.

Quite probably Caroline was unhappy. Linda decided to call Caroline from the pay telephone in a booth on the first floor of her building. After all, Clara Bell Ackerman knew Caroline and there was no use letting the strange girl guess that the model was unhappy. With her mind made up, Linda put a nickel in the slot and dialed. She would ask Caroline to meet her at the theater, see the finale of the musical, and then go on with her and Ronnie for whatever they might do. Her conscience hurt her as she waited for an answer.

She had left Caroline alone so much lately—while she was away on business, on the house party on the Markley yacht, and other evenings. True, two girls who shared the same room and door key had no claim on each other's time, she told herself, but if you were kind, you wanted those around you to be happy.

The telephone rang repeatedly in the apartment, but there was no answer. She replaced the receiver and retrieved her nickel. So Terry had come at last. That was good. Then Caroline would be happy. Linda puckered her smooth brows with a hope that Caroline would not mention the actress. There could have been no real romance there. And surely the ring incident had shown him what Mina was like.

She gave her floor to the elevator operator after she had signed in, and went up to the long corridor on which her office opened. "We're sort of deserted tonight," the man said. "Not much doing. You're my first passenger for an hour."

"I am?" At the moment she did not think of the night watchman who was eating at the sandwich shop across the street.

Down the hall she could see the shadowed yellow light coming from the glass door of the outer office of the Bagley Models' agency.

If she married Ronald—no, that was wrong—WHEN she married Ronnie, she would go away with him on tour and this place would no longer be part of her life. She would miss it, she mused, for it had kept her eager and alert and in the middle of things.

She tilted the milk shake so it would not spill. In her sudden good-will mood she wished she had brought Clara Bell a sandwich as a gift. The girl really looked underfed, and yet she had part-time jobs here and there. It was a funny world.

She opened the door, a gay greeting on her lips. Then the milk shake fell to the floor, spilled, spread a white pool of foam across the rug. Linda heard a shriek echoing down the corridors and knew dimly that it was hers.

children will be mixed during the next year. Their business will be much favored, but they should be warned to guard against a certain element of deception. The child who is born on this date will be clever and original, persistent and determined. Being somewhat self-willed and unyielding, however, such a personality will be liable to incur the displeasure of superiors.

Hints on Etiquette
If you are entertaining at dinner or luncheon, don't try to "put on the dog." Give your guests what you can afford, simple and unpretentious though it may be, see that it is well cooked and daintily served. Make your guests feel welcome, and you will be a successful hostess.

Horoscope for Sunday
Those whose birthdays are on this date may look forward to a favorable year. They will gain through women and elderly relatives. They should be warned, however, to exercise care in business dealings with strangers and in regard to documents. Born today a child will possess a brilliant intellect and genius in some form, especially if the birth takes place late in the day. PLOTTING DIPLOMATS

GERMAN "fifth column" activities in the Americas have received the serious attention of delegates at the Havana Conference. Proposals were made that the work of diplomats and consular agents of the totalitarian powers be investigated and their immunity privileges perhaps be curtailed.

It is not proper for the authorized representatives of foreign powers to plot against the government of the country in which they are stationed. But lately that seems to have been one of the chief missions of Nazi diplomats in all the countries which have so far fallen before the German advance, and it is doubtless an important part of the work of many of them in this hemisphere. No one should seek to curb their legitimate activities, but neither can they be allowed to undertake the destruction of government under diplomatic immunity.

BRITISH OFFENSIVE

WHY are the British taking the apparently imminent blitzkrieg so calmly? Because, now that she is really on the job of defeating the Nazis, Britain has begun to take her usual long look. Her plan is simple:

First she will fight the invading Germans dune by dune of the beaches, street by street of the cities, hill by hill and town by town until she has been able to throw them out for good. By this time, she admits, she is going to be pretty weary and somewhat damaged—but you should see the other fellow! Germany, she says, will then be exhausted. Britain is already set to fight the invader from her own isles. What she is buying munitions for at the present moment, for future delivery, is for the great offensive which will follow. These bombings and swattings the British have to go through meantime are mere minor details. What they have their eye on is the day Churchill rides through Berlin.

Two things to remember about a July second that its worst effects can be avoided: first that it's normal and second that its worst effects can be avoided by following the well known rules of rest and temperate eating and drinking.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE.... Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up a pair of hours earlier than usual and spent a few moments abusing the fan for not doing a better job during the night. Visited the back yard where a pert wren was singing delightfully. Wondered what happened to the woodpecker that for weeks rolled out his early morning call on the light pole in the alley. Cast a disinterested eye at weeds growing in the garden and envied the dog that was stretched out contentedly on the ground in the shade. Noted the lawn was wet, but am not yet certain whether from dew or sweat. Took my coffee cold and headed downtown to join Rotarians in the First Annual Farm Tour.

Stopped first at Clay Hitler's farm in Washington Township to view erosion control under government supervision. Clay has 140 acres, the main income from which is on grass and hay with his net income as much as could be produced by grain. Strip farming there with diversion terraces preventing washing. Learned that the crop producing soil of Ohio originally was only 8 to 10 inches deep and that much of the land already has lost 25 percent of this soil.

Next did visit Sterley Croman's four acre poultry farm and hatchery. Sterley started there with 200 hens and later began the sale of chicks. He now has incubators with 111,000 egg capacity and has 65 flock owners in the county producing eggs for him. He supervises the production and pays a big premium for the eggs. A fine job being done there. The plant produces 300,000 chicks a year. And that is a lot of chicks. Learned that 1,468,000 acres of land are necessary to produce the food consumed each year by Ohio's chickens. Also that Paul Johnson some time back culled his flock of chickens and that Bob Bremer bought the culls. Within a few weeks Bob was getting more eggs from the "culls" than Paul was getting from his select hens.

Enroute to Bob Musser's stock farm the Rev. Robert Kelsey told of grace said by the young son of Dr. Robert Reed, pastor of Indianola Presbyterian church up Columbus way. The boy apparently had been listening in on the radio, for he bowed his head and said: "This food is coming to you through the courtesy of God Almighty."

That Musser farm is quite a place. There did inspect his grand herd of Guernseys and listened as his expert herdsman explained about the cattle and later some of the finest hogs I have seen, all Hampshires. Learned that the average cow there is producing 400 pounds of butterfat a year as compared with the county average of 150 pounds, and did see some bovine royalty that has 600 production records.

Next to Homer Quillen's farm, Homer being a hybrid corn raiser and breeder of Angus cattle. Listened with interest as he showed how hybrid corn is handled in production tests and stood amazed as he declared that in each patch are 150 or more different kinds of corn. Didn't know there were that many.

Roger Hedges' place followed, there seeing the production of hybrid corn, all a hand process and a task in the hands of F. D. Richey, the world's outstanding hybrid corn expert. He explained it all, some I got, some I didn't, so never would attempt to put the process down on paper. Interesting, very interesting. You should see it.

Last on the tour was the C. B. Teegardin & Sons farm that has produced so many International short horn champions. Paul Teegardin, who is president of the National Polled Shorthorn Breeders Association, paraded his animals for us and explained their fine points. Since the hour was near noon I had difficulty viewing that fat stock as anything except steaks, but Teegardin cattle are entirely too blue blooded to be eaten. About 145 head of cattle now on the place and of that number about a score soon will be headed out on the livestock show circuit. More blue ribbons to be added to the already great collection of the farm.

ARMY WEAKEST LINK

WASHINGTON—Now that the job of nominating presidential candidates is over, the Nation's Capital is settling back to the main problem before it—that of national defense.

Both branches of the service are in the hands of two brand new cabinet officers, both Republicans, and both keeping politics strictly out of the Army and Navy. In the case of the former, Henry L. Stimson has a far more difficult problem on his hands than when he served as Secretary of War in the Taft Administration.

He is up against the fact that for exactly twenty years—ever since the World War—the United States Army has been as moribund and antiquated as the Indian forts which it still maintains on the Western prairies.

Here is example No. 1 of what Secretary Stimson is up against.

If a foreign power wanted to subdue the United States, its most logical strategic move would be to establish a line through Detroit or Cleveland south to the Ohio River. This would cut the industrial East off the agricultural West. It would sever New York and Philadelphia to the Middle West. It would stop iron ore shipments from the lake regions. It would starve out New York.

Yet although army officers admit this is the strategic area they will have to defend, the overwhelming mass of U. S. troops today is located in the South and West in the wide open spaces which they may never have to defend.

BIG CITY FIGHTING

Hitler has won the present war largely by military operations inside densely populated areas. His troops have been trained to operate in Oslo, Rotterdam and Antwerp. Fighting in city streets is far different from fighting on the plains of Oklahoma, yet there are almost no troops in or around the big cities of the Atlantic seaboard.

As a matter of fact the location of the U. S. Army today is based not upon tactics or strategy, but upon the climate. "But the weather!" moans the average army officer when you start talking to him about transferring to a new post in the East.

If the high command of the U. S. Army were awake and interested in something more than paper defense, it would hold regular maneuvers in the most densely populated industrial areas of the United States, and would station a large part of their men regularly east of the Mississippi River and north of the Ohio.

IGNORANCE OF TACTICS

Example No. 2 of inefficiency is the complete lack of army officer interest in tactics. Most of the high-ranking (Continued on Page Six)

Call of Open Road Rivals Spa Treatment

● IS THERE any advantage in a vacation at a resort for mineral springs or can't you do as much good taking to the great open spaces?

Spa treatment seems to have more or less gone out of fashion and undeservedly so. It used to be the regular thing for the family to vacation at the springs—now the regular thing is to get in the automobile and ride, ride, ride.

It certainly can be said, in general, that the ride-ride-ride vacation is best suited to young and vigorous members of the family. It's likely to make the older ones need a little time to rest to recover from their vacation. They can have a good, restful, healthy spell at the springs though.

When you get down to analyze the good that mineral springs do, you must acknowledge that the routine life imposed on you at a spa is of more value than the waters.

waters. All good spas now have arrangements for baths, dietary regulation, exercise and massage, and competent medical consultation is available to outline a proper daily routine.

This treatment is of value in chronic disabling conditions including those affecting the heart and circulation, rheumatism, digestive-chronic stomach, intestinal and gallbladder conditions, nervous and, occasionally, skin troubles.

Different mineral waters are of value because of their alkaline properties, salts of calcium or phosphate, mild laxative properties, iron content or natural heat. Whether the minute amounts of radium some of them contain do any good is doubtful.

Water as a cathartic.

In thinking of natural cathartics we stress the value of roughage foods and give no attention to the claims of plain, good old-fashioned water.

Today's Horoscope
Fortunes for today's birthday

children will be mixed during the next year. Their business will be much favored, but they should be warned to guard against a certain element of deception. The child who is born on this date will be clever and original, persistent and determined. Being somewhat self-willed and unyielding, however, such a personality will be liable to incur the displeasure of superiors.

Hints on Etiquette

If you are entertaining at dinner or luncheon, don't try to "put on the dog." Give your guests what you can afford, simple and unpretentious though it may be, see that it is well cooked and daintily served. Make your guests feel welcome, and you will be a successful hostess.

Horoscope for Sunday

Those whose birthdays are on this date may look forward to a favorable year. They will gain through women and elderly relatives. They should be warned, however, to exercise care in business dealings with strangers and in regard to documents. Born today a child will possess a brilliant intellect and genius in some form, especially if the birth takes place late in the day. He or she will, however, be dictatorial, determined to the point of obstinacy, but good-hearted and generally successful, nevertheless.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

STOPPERS VS. LOSERS

WHEN counting up the tricks you intend to seek for a game in No Trump, it is important to bear in mind the number of stoppers in the opponents' suit, especially if one of them has been knocked out by the opening lead. With only one remaining, you can afford to lose the lead only once before the opponents' suit is set up. With two left, you can lose two tricks before their suit is established. Losing one more than these numbers, in either case, means that the enemy will get the lead again when it has one or more long cards set up in its suit. Your only hope, then, is to keep the one with the remainder out of the lead, letting only his partner in—a good sign if you can do it.

North East South West

Bidding varied widely on this deal. In one case, after South's 1-Heart, North called 2-No Trumps and South 3-No Trumps. In another North responded to the opener with 2-Diamonds, South bid 3-Diamonds and North 3-No Trumps. At a fourth North answered with 2-Clubs and South then bid 2-No Trumps, North 3-No Trumps. Where North was declarer, making the contract was a cinch because East led a club.

One declarer in the South managed to get set after a lead of the spade 4. He won with the dummy's K, led the heart J to the A, took the returned spade with the Q, then went after diamonds. Seeing three tricks in spades, four in hearts, he decided two diamond tricks would fix him up. But West ducked the first diamond, letting East win, and the latter fired back his last spade to the A.

When South now led diamonds a second time West won with the A and cashed his spade thirteenth, following with a club to the A and setting the contract. The other South declarers made contract because instead of diamonds they went for clubs, in which the lead would be lost only once if the queen was caught.

Today's Garden-Graph

Proper care of cut flowers

After completing an attractive flower arrangement, it is discouraging to find both flowers and foliage wilting within a few hours. Simple precautions, however, will increase the ability of flowers to remain fresh for longer periods, as shown by Figure 1 of the accompanying Garden-Graph, is to make a slanting cut on the end of each flower stem, for this prevents the stem from resting squarely on the bottom of the container. The long slanting cut presents a larger surface with which the flower can absorb water.

Figure 2 in the Garden-Graph shows a wrong method of preparing cut flowers to be kept in water. Here the stem has been cut in a straight line with the result that it rests squarely on the bottom of the container and therefore will find it difficult to absorb enough water to keep the flower properly fresh.

Flowers should be cut early in the morning or in the cool of the evening. Place the stems deeply into cold water and set in a cool place for a period of 12 hours before arranging them.

Fish which are strangers to such latitudes are found in the seaport of Peru. The presence of the chilly Humboldt current accounts for the many strange species brought to these waters.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, July 27

THE ASTRAL configurations for this day are conflicting and perplexing. There are rather peculiar mental problems and social contradictions, but with the mentality receiving certain very reliable stabilizing rays, it is probable that all dubious situations may be safely adjusted and treacherous predicaments ironed out happily. But keep alert to schemes and equivocal entanglements in business as well as the private associations.

Those whose birthday it is may find their year interesting and intriguing because of certain peculiar, subtle and entangling alliances which may challenge their integrity, discernment and sound judgment. While the situation is not exactly sinister, it will take finesse and discretion to avoid duplicity, snares and pitfalls in both business and private relations. Still there is a dependable balance in mental adjustments which may result in "turning imps (of annoyance and apprehension) into angels," pleasant and gracious.

A child born on this day may have a well balanced mentality, with much sound judgment and shrewdness. It will be persistent and dogged, probably provoking the hostility of its associates and superiors.

For Sunday, July 28

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds auguries of several very unusual and dramatic events, in which those who are able to withstand the tests and perhaps tribulations of experience and human adventure may be selected for tokens of esteem, preferment and promotion.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for the thrilling adventure of having high honors, dignity, promotion or expression of favoritism from those in high places.

A child born on this day, while being impulsive, aggressive and possibly quarrelsome, should be remarkably endowed with creative talents of unusual scope.

In 1915 a bottle was picked up off the coast of Boston which had gone around the world three times.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

generals, holding down cushy berths at the top, are much more interested in social rank, promotion and the debutante parties of their daughters than in military tactics. Many of them don't even know how to handle troops when they are in command.

For instance, the Army has just finished the largest peacetime maneuver in history in Mississippi and Louisiana. Seventy thousand men maneuvered in this area for five months with results that were sadly disappointing to Washington observers.

Most important effect of the maneuvers was that troops deteriorated. The enlisted men were in worse shape at the end than at the start. Their commanding officers did not keep them busy, did not know how to handle them in sham battle.

For instance, Major General Walter C. Short, commanding the Sixth Division in Louisiana, sent his men in to defend a line 30,000 yards wide. All a division is supposed to defend is a front 4,000 yards wide, and in the Argonne during the World War, nine divisions were concentrated on a line 37,000 yards wide, with many supporting divisions behind.

After the Louisiana maneuvers were over, Major General Herbert J. Brees, commanding the Eighth Corps Area, remarked that the only people to be complimented during the entire maneuvers were the enlisted men and the lieutenants.

EXAMPLE NO. 3 is the army village. This is one of the most iniquitous systems in the Army, and most officers agree that it should be abolished. Yet the army village remains, year after year.

The army village is a remnant of the old blockhouse of Indian war days, usually situated in the interior, far from the scene of any possible attack from Europe or the Pacific. They are a handicap because a modern army, in order to be effective, must operate and maneuver in large masses, not a few thousand men at a time.

The army village breaks up the army into small parts, and also requires that about 40 percent of the enlisted men be kept busy mowing lawns, keeping books, doing stenography, operating a motion picture show or running a company canteen. Thus the troops degenerate into a bunch of housekeepers, not fighters.

Furthermore, in training, a company commander is supposed to have about 150 men. But actually he has only 40 or 50. The rest are out keeping the army village neat.

Actually, it would pay the War Department to hire civilian labor to do these odd chores around the posts. Civilian labor usually is cheaper in the end, and the army is not operating for the purpose of civic improvement but to train fighters.

UPSIDE-DOWN PERSONNEL SYSTEM

Much of the Army's weakness derives from EXAMPLE NO. 4, which is the complete inertia engendered by the promotion system. An army officer knows that if he is reasonably sober he will be promoted automatically, according to age, no matter what else he may do. He merely has to wait for officers ahead of him to die off. It is inconceivable that any business firm would promote its employees on the same system.

Example of army weakness NO. 5 is the starvation method of getting recruits. The men who enlist in the Army do so largely because they can get no jobs anywhere else. Naturally this means that a large part of the men represent the lowest stratum of society. Few men of the wealthy or middle classes now go into the Army unless they enter West Point.

Real fact is, however, that the ROTC units in various universities have been turning out men superior to West Point. The latter is largely a disciplinary school, and since the tuition is free, it gets men from families of lower economic level. Boys from the leading families all go to the large universities. Also, if they are members of ROTC, they get 800 hours of work in field artillery, while the West Point graduate gets only 80.

Yet the West Point graduate usually goes on to be promoted to the higher ranks, and eventually bosses the Army. No wonder, therefore, that many of the top generals are moribund and completely incapable of bringing the U. S. Army up to date in these days of emergency.

Hitler has given Goering a new title: "Marshal of the Reich." That ought to keep Hermann busy for awhile — striking off new medals to commemorate the event.

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION

"For want of a nail the shoe was lost." And for want of a shoe, horse and leader, the battle was lost. This is the behind-the-scenes story of the struggle to get the convention to declare against the third term. Although it was in the minds of everyone, the hard leg work was done by three delegates from Florida—Messrs. Henderson, Maguire and Anderson, each of whom was a past president of the Florida State Bar Association.

When these men reached Chicago they immediately began making the rounds of the headquarters of the various state delegations, button-holing candidates, high and low. As they started they had little hope of success. To their surprise, however, they found that even in a convention of cowards, courage was respected. Gradually, their group grew in size. I was included—the only person writing for the newspapers who was on the inside.

By Wednesday they had strategy. It was to present to the platform committee a plank reaffirming the third term resolution of 1896 by the Democratic Convention of 1896 which nominated William J. Bryan for the Presidency. That resolution reads as follows:

"We believe it to be the unwritten law of this Republic, established by custom and usage of one hundred years, and sanctioned by the examples of the greatest and wisest of those who founded and maintained our government, that no man should be eligible for a third term of the Presidential office."

The Platform Committee to whom this plank was to be presented consisted of fifty-four members. If a single one of the fifty-four could be found who had the courage to present a minority report in favor of readopting the 1896 plank, it could be presented to the convention itself, and be open to debate upon the floor.

Believe it or not, the anti-third term group secured the promise of delegates from twenty-four States that they would speak for the adoption of this resolution if it could be brought on the floor of the convention.

This included not less than six United States Senators, a Governor, and a former Governor. After a careful count it was ascertained that not less than 300 delegates would have voted to adopt the resolution had these distinguished men been permitted to debate this question over a nation-wide radio hook-up. With three hundred votes or more registered against a third term, would President Roosevelt have accepted renomination?

There is no answer to this question. The debate did not take place. The resolution was taken to the Platform Committee by a committee of five, headed by Congressman Elmer Ryan of Minnesota. They were denied a hearing. Senator Wagner, Chairman of the Platform Committee, met them at the door and said "No." He refused to receive the resolution and refused to permit the delegation to enter the room. In addition, not a single member of the Platform Committee of fifty-four, could be induced to sign his name to a minority report.

Senator Tydings of Maryland remarked, "As Napoleon said, in a war, men are nothing; a man is Shortages in France of food, clothing, leather, soap and oil are acute, the dispatch stated, adding that the French people are becoming "aware that the Germans are holding the entire nation responsible for the war."

The Daily Mail in a dispatch from the French-Spanish frontier, said Daladier and his former cabinet colleague, Yvon Delbos, along with 30 French deputies and senators and a score of high officials, bankers and journalists, have been landed at Marseilles from the steamer Messilia and placed under strict surveillance at a hotel under an armed escort.

According to the Mail, the Messilia, with Daladier and the others on board, had been anchored in the Gironde estuary for the last two weeks. Suddenly the ship received orders to proceed to Marseilles, arriving late Thursday, the Mail said.

TINY INSECTS CAUSING DAMAGE TO CORN CROP

Many Pickaway County farmers are reporting their corn fields to be infected with a tiny green insect, identified by agricultural officials as aphids. The tiny insects which work along the stalk and under the leaves of the corn, rob the plant of its vitality, officials said, and added that the reduction in the county's wheat crop may have been due to aphids.

When found on rose bushes or other plants they may be controlled by a nicotine spray, which consists of one teaspoon of nicotine sulphate dissolved in one gallon of water with an addition of 2 ounces of soap. One application is not sufficient because of the hatching eggs which are not destroyed by the insecticide.

Application of such spray to wheat or corn fields would not be practical, however, experts claim.

LONDON—No difficulties are anticipated between Great Britain and the United States as a result of British efforts to blockade the entire European continent, London authorities said today. It was said that Washington has been fully informed regarding the British plans. The British hope that United States authorities will cooperate as much as possible in ensuring that no cargoes sail from American ports without receiving British "navicerts."

It was also reiterated that no peace proposals have been received from any source. This statement was made in view of other "whispering suggestions" that some sort of peace plan might have been communicated to Britain through Spain.

LIGHTNING BURNS HUGE OIL TANK AT LIMA PLANT

LIMA, July 27—Fire, started when lightning struck a huge 30,000-barrel oil tank of the Standard Oil Refinery Company in Lima, has virtually burned itself out, company officials said today.

Only 2,000 barrels of oil was in the tank at the time the bolt struck. Part of this was pumped off from the bottom of the tank, leaving the oil on the surface to burn itself out. Unofficial estimates placed the loss at $10,000.

Firemen and company employees were kept on duty all night to guard against spread of the blaze to any of the scores of tanks in the same field. Smoke belled over South Lima and flames shot 50 feet in the air while the blaze was at its height.

But "The Masses" were not so foolish, after all!

LESS LOUDLY NOW, you may still hear an occasional agitator blasting away at the American system of business—which depends on big factories, big networks of dealers, trade-marked goods, heavy advertising, and low prices.

Agitators complained for years that "the masses" were injured by this system, and that we'd all be richer if we went back to the old cracker-barrel days.

But in spite of the complaints, little factories which have made dependable goods grew into big factories. Dealers insisted on having trade-marked goods which their customers could recognize. And the heavy advertising helped to give us our modern newspapers, magazines and radio.

Who built this system? The masses built it, by insisting on crackers they could recognize in the package, on automobiles, soups, soaps, chewing gum, cigarettes, and all other articles that carried well-known trade names.

So the agitators have had to pipe down. They have discovered that "the masses" were not so easy to lead astray after all.

on England was cited as proof of this country's determination to fight to the end.

Attention of official quarters was called to a dispatch published in the United States under a Berlin date-line setting forth the purported terms of a German peace offer now said to be in the hands of King Gustav.

The story actually was sent from Switzerland, the spokesman said, before the correspondent responsible for it entered this country. His deportation is expected.

LONDON, July 27—Britain's government was still without official word today of any communication from Sweden regarding a reported peace offer from Chancellor Hitler.

Authorities said the government has received no official information that such a communication may be forthcoming.

(Editor's Note: The report, as published in the United States, claimed that Germany had sent peace terms to King Gustav of Sweden for transmission to Britain.)

It was stated privately in London that the peace offer report savors of the "usual propaganda" and that no great importance can be attached to it at the present moment.

At the same time, it was emphasized there has been no change in the British attitude toward Hitler. Furthermore, the recent firm utterances of Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax regarding Britain's determination to fight the war to its conclusion stand still, British officials stated.

It was also reiterated that no peace proposals have been received from any source. This statement was made in view of other "whispering suggestions" that some sort of peace plan might have been communicated to Britain through Spain.

LIGHTNING BURNS HUGE OIL TANK AT LIMA PLANT

LIMA, July 27—Fire, started when lightning struck a huge 30,000-barrel oil tank of the Standard Oil Refinery Company in Lima, has virtually burned itself out, company officials said today.

Only 2,000 barrels of oil was in the tank at the time the bolt struck. Part of this was pumped off from the bottom of the tank, leaving the oil on the surface to burn itself out. Unofficial estimates placed the loss at $10,000.

Firemen and company employees were kept on duty all night to guard against spread of the blaze to any of the scores of tanks in the same field. Smoke billowed over South Lima and flames shot 50 feet in the air while the blaze was at its height.

Meanwhile, Romanian-Yugoslavian tension flared up after it was disclosed that Romania secretly offered military aid to Italy in the event of an Italian conflict with Yugoslavia.

In the event that Italy should not need such aid, it was reported, Romania offered Rome all secret military information about Yugoslavia gathered by the Romanian government in recent years.

Belgrade, on learning of this offer, instructed its envoy at Bucharest to lodge a stern protest.

Last night members of the Yugoslavian cabinet conferred with Prince Paul, Yugoslav regent, regarding a possible reconstruction of the cabinet.

But "The Masses" were not so foolish, after all!

LESS LOUDLY NOW, you may still hear an occasional agitator blasting away at the American system of business—which depends on big factories, big networks of dealers, trade-marked goods, heavy advertising, and low prices.

Agitators complained for years that "the masses" were injured by this system, and that we'd all be richer if we went back to the old cracker-barrel days.

But in spite of the complaints, little factories which have made dependable goods grew into big factories. Dealers insisted on having trade-marked goods which their customers could recognize. And the heavy advertising helped to give us our modern newspapers, magazines and radio.

Who built this system? The masses built it, by insisting on crackers they could recognize in the package, on automobiles, soups, soaps, chewing gum, cigarettes, and all other articles that carried well-known trade names.

So the agitators have had to pipe down. They have discovered that "the masses" were not so easy to lead astray after all.
